AP FOR INTERESTING LOCAL NEV

The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser publishes an interesting letter from the plains. We make the following extracts from it. The letter is dated at Fort Harker, and the writer says:

Harker, and the writer says:

"Fort Harker is a military post, about seventy-two miles from Junction City, and about six miles east of Ellsworth Station, the present terminus of the Union Pacific road. The track is laid twenty miles west of Ellsworth, and is being rapidly pushed toward Denver. We are doing business here in primitive style—as this log office evidences. I am reminded of the stories of Western hotels, where the gents were obliged to step into the back yard while the ladies prepare for bed, for nine of us sleep in one room and on one bed, the floor, but we miss the ladies. Even 'Lo, the poor Indian,' has sent his squaw South. I was surprised to find indies at some of our stations as I crossed the plains. Away out here in this counthe plains. Away out here in this country, among the hostile tribes of Indians, it does seem strange to meet them. But they seem perfectly indifferent to the trials and hardships that surround them, and more courageous than some men that I meet.

more courageous than some men that I meet.

"From the time that I left Buffalo I may say that I have been constantly traveling. My only cossation being delays upon the railroad and stage route. I reached Leavenworth on Sunday a. m. at 4 o'clock, and left Monday a. m. at 7 o'clock, and was three weeks getting to Denver and back. We started with a military guard of ten infantry, and traveled night and day until we reached Monument Station, about half way. There we missed connection and remained four days. We got there Saturday a. m., and on Sunday morning I witnessed an attack by the Indians on a train camped about a mile and a half from the Fort. They besieged it all day, that night and about half the next day (Friday), when Capt. Conyugham took twenty men and marched to the assistance of the train. He skirmished with the savages while the mules were being larnessed and put in motion. When all was in readiness and the movement commenced, there we should be the same and the movement commenced, there we should be the same and the movement commenced, there we should be said as the production of the same and the movement commenced, thered skins to the supplex of about one has day (Friday), when Capt. Conyugham took twenty men and marched to the assistance of the train. He skirnished with the savages while the mules were being harnessed and put in motion. When all was in readiness and the movement commenced, the red skins, to the number of about one handred, attacked them fiercely. Captain Schermerhorn and John Bullock, one of the stage drivers, took a team from the company's stable, hitched them to a small howitzer belonging to the Fort, and together with two men from the garrison rode out about three-fourths of a mile and shelled them, placing three shots directly in their midst. As no officer was with the piece I nominated myself General and came back safe and sound and saven feethigh. Mr. Tenis, Division Appl., saw the performance, and reported it is Deaver, and a modest account appeared in the morning paper. I had some feer that we should be attacked when we proceeded on our route again, but strangs to report we did not see an Indian from that hour."

"I like Denver, it is the biggest little city I have ever been in. It really is a dignified town and is a go-ahead active place, with an age of eight years only. All the incidents of its early history are fresh—and the vigilanti stories abound. We were frequently shown notorious characters who had figured conspicuously in its and Kanssa, organization. One gentleman came through in the coach who fought at Lecompton, was captain of a corapany, &c. It was very interesting to listen to him and learn the struggle they made to organize here.

"It is surprising, as you approach Denver, how distance will decive one—I first caught a glimpse of Pikes Peak, art Chey, enne, one hundred and fifty miles away, and it did not look one quarter that distance. After arriving in Denver I would have wagered that I could walk to the base in an hone but I found the pearest in the paper is a hore but I found the pearest in the paper is the paper in the pearest in the pearest in the paper is the pearest in the coach who have in a paper but I found the pear

After arriving in Denver I would have wagered that I could walk to the base in an hour, but I found the nearest point was nearly two miles off. They tell the story of a gentleman who started out for a short walk before breakfast intending to visit the nearest approach, and who missed his dinner and took a very late supper. The snow looked really refreshing and the air was deliciously cool as it supper. The snow looked reany renessing and the air was deliciously cool as it not much fear of the Indians stracking coaches strongly guarded. They have tried it and lost heavily, and say 'paper wagon is no good to Ingin,' but 'big horse (engine,) cannot run through their hunting grounds.' The poet Pope may have admired them, but I say d—n them. Let one show himself near this place and no one would sleep for a month. We hear of them across the plains, before us and behind us, and come across new made graves, but they have a per avoided my travel in the coach, and a much obliged to them. If they will continue thus I will sometime when I can afford it invite them all to a dog supper. We killed one of their horses at the Monument fight, and they ate a whole hind quarter of it. How was that for 'Lo?' "

How a Disappointed Young Lady
Got Married at Last.

One of the most remarkable results of disappointed love that we have heard of lately, transpired on Arbor Hill within the past few days. A well-known young lady, the daughter of a merchant on the dock, who was very fond of a mate friend of hers, and to whom she was engaged to be married, suddenly became as hateful of her lover, as she was previously enamored of him. On Monday evening she happened into a well-known ice cream saloon on Pearl street with a lady friend to partake of a dish of cream.

Inagine her surprise on seeing her in-

partake of a dish of cream.

Imagine her surprise on seeing her intended scated with a couple of other ladies. He was all attention to one with black eyes and flowing ringlets, and in the presence of his affianced, took a ring from the black-eyed girl's finger, and placed it on his own. This was too much for her to bear. She became exasperated, and her conduct attracted the attention of the young man, who proceeded to the table.

her conduct attracted the attention of the young man, who proceeded to the table where she sat, and endeavored to persuade her that "it was all right;" his lady friend was an old acquaintance, and their familiarity was castomary on meeting. Young lady "could not see it in that light."

The more he talked the worse she got, until finally she left the saloon and her companion under a high state of excitement and rage. She proceeded to her home and wept hitterly all night, to think how she had misapplied her confidence. Her agitated mind was discovered by her parents the next morning, who endeavored

THE FOLLOWING ANECDOTE of General

The Following Anecdots of General Lopez, from La Liberte, of Paris, is at present current:

Lopez one day fell into an ambush of the enemy. He at once commenced a retreat, during which his borse was shot under him. One of his men then took his colonel up behind him, but the horse proving unable to carry the double weight, slacked its speed. Lopez, preceiving that they must both be captured, drew a pistol from his belt, shot his preserver through the head, rolled him out of the saddle, and escaped alone!
